Halo war

 The drop pods came down like rockets. The spartans came out with blazing guns as brutes fell, jackles fell, grunts fell even a couple hunters fell from the rocket launchers. It felt like a paint ball war, blue, orange, and red blood was flying everywhere. Then when it felt like our energy shields were down the airstrikes came with bombs, ammo, cover and reinforcements. When the airstrike left a message came down to the spartans helmets, it was their admiral, **

 "We passed the whole covenant army and their army is about 4 miles long, 1 mile width and one of the spartans we sent down is a traitor they will not shoot him but he is a great spartan. Don't let him fool you, kill him and finish off the army. We sent down rocket launchers and spartan lasers to help you with those hunters. Be carful, watch out for gun fire and keep hunting." So half of them were firing at the Jackles and whats left of the people with launchers & lazers are firing at the hunters. Finely a gap appeared within the hunters. But turrets were behind them so they started firing but most of the time they hit the other covenant coming by. Then the covenant stopped firing the turrets and started running towards the spartans. **

 "FALL BACK, RETREAT," called one of the spartans but it was to late the hunters and brutes went past the cover and started shooting. That's when the spartans did it for one of the many times they fell back to base and the covenant didn't follow they started killing the spartans with the beam rifles that the Jackles had. The spartans were falling, dieing. They didn't have any hope until...
